

The Great Decision writing assignment

Last class we discussed decision making and the different factors that influence decision making. Consider these carefully in your response.

Create a story from the first person point of view about ANY decision a person might face and the factors that influence that person. Your initial incident should be the event (might be a conversation or an encounter or anything) that brings the decision to the fore front. You can write it as a conversation so long as I see the thoughts of the person or it can just be there thoughts as they are doing something (riding a bus, washing dishes, sitting in class, etc)

Your goal is to

- a) Show the factors that influence a person making a decision
- b) Show the type of character the decision maker is
- c) Continue to experiment with literary devices (simile, metaphor, personification, foreshadowing, symbol and imagery)

You should aim for your writing to be one to two pages in length.
